Final Report submitted to APN

Overview of project work and outcomes

Non-technical summary

The 6th Open Meeting brought together over 1,000 participants from nearly 90 countries - to date the biggest and most diverse gathering of social scientists and policy makers dealing with global environmental change. Its title, "International Security, Globalization and Global Environmental Change," aptly reflected current global realities. In addition, the structure of the conference was deliberately chosen to address the main objectives of this meeting: developing the research agenda on human dimensions, identifying areas of future research, promoting capacity building and fostering the translation of scientific knowledge into the policy arena. The structure of the 6th Open Meeting included an opening ceremony with keynote speakers, 4 high-level morning plenaries, a funders/ scientists round table discussion, 130 parallel sessions with oral presenters, nearly 100 poster presentations, and evening activities. Furthermore, the 4-day Open Meeting was embedded in a larger process of back-to-back meetings and capacity-building activities:

- YHDR (Young Human Dimensions Researchers) Network meeting (1/2 day)
- Open Meeting (4 days)
- National Committee Meeting (1/2 day)
- Side events on capacity building and the pre Open Meeting capacity building training seminars (3 days)
- Lunchtime presentations of co-organizers and special networking initiatives such as MRI and PERN
- SSC Meetings of IHDP core projects immediately preceding or following the OM (Urbanization, LUCC, IDGEC, the IHDP SC)

Objectives

The main objectives of the 6th Open Meeting were:

1. to promote a better understanding of both the opportunities and challenges in responding to global environmental change, entailing a critical assessment of what the community has achieved to date (both the wider human dimensions community and those engaged in the IHDP networks);
2. to develop a forward-looking action plan that will better integrate human dimensions research into contemporary policy debates;
3. to fashion a human dimensions research agenda specific and relevant to current global realities and scenarios of future trends in global transformations.

Amount received and number years supported

2005-2006: USD $25,000

Activity undertaken

APN funds were used to support travel and accommodation of actively participating researchers from APN member countries (the majority participants being young and from developing countries in the Asia-Pacific region), to take part in the 6th Open Meeting of the Human Dimensions of Global Environmental Change Research Community, as well as other adjoining and embedded events.

The 4-day event consisted of four morning plenary sessions, nearly 130 parallel sessions, round tables, side events and poster presentations; in addition, a 3-day series of capacity-building workshops on four separate methodological issues preceded the 6th Open Meeting. To start things off, the official opening featured high-level keynote speakers from the policy arena, such as UNEP's Executive Director Klaus Toepfer, Rector of the United Nations University, Hans van Ginkel, and the Chinese Vice Minister for Science and Technology, Liu Yanhua. The morning plenary presentations and discussions were held by top researchers from the human dimensions community, addressing topics such as the policy relevance of human dimensions research, how to ground this research in present global realities, the weaknesses and benefits of interdisciplinary research, and a stock-taking of human dimensions research to-date.

Results

The 6th Open Meeting was successful at its goals of strengthening IHDP's institutional alliances as well as broadening its funding base. Thus strategic partnerships were pursued with co-organizing institutions such as CIESIN, IIASA, IGES, the University of Bonn, and UNU. This enabled not only more innovative cooperation on sessions, but also set the stage for future collaborative efforts. Furthermore, a strong focus on interdisciplinarity and inter-regionalism encouraged new and innovative collaboration and comparison between and among previously disparate fields.

A particular showcase was given for the Land-Use and Land-Cover Change (LUCC) project, which ended 10 years of successful research and findings and embedded its final synthesis and hand-over to the Global Land Project (GLP) within the 6th Open Meeting. Another specific platform was given for the outcomes of IHDP's Arizona Workshop in 2004, focusing on the cross-cutting themes of Vulnerability, Adaptation and Resilience. IHDP is in the process of providing a comprehensive publication on these topics to help lead the debate within the social sciences by presenting its efforts so far at defining and outlining these terms.

Finally, numerous established or emerging groups took the opportunity to arrange side meetings where topics of mutual interest could be discussed. Meetings were convened, for example, by the IHDP Scientific Committee, IHDP's core projects and regional networks such as the Mountain Research Initiative (MRI) and the Population-Environment Research Initiative (PERN).

A particularly successful side event was the embedded mini-conference for IHDP's National Committees. This meeting was well attended and all regions were represented. In this way, representatives from the Asia-Pacific region had numerous opportunities to network, make contacts and exchange ideas and experiences with other researchers from the region.

Relevance to APN scientific research framework and objectives

The Open Meetings bring together scientists working on human dimensions research topics. The Open Meeting therefore offered a platform for insights into the latest research results of human dimensions research, topics being currently discussed in the community, and insights into upcoming new research directions. The focus of the meeting thus directly addresses APN's mission, which involves fostering global change research in the Asia-Pacific region, increasing developing country participation in that research, and strengthening interactions between the science community and policy-makers. At the same time the Open Meeting directly fell into two categories which were listed in the call for proposals:

- Synthesis and analysis of existing research and new research which addresses knowledge gaps in key areas;
- Capacity and networking activities.

The 2005 Open Meeting addressed 14 key themes in its sessions, structured around IHDP core projects, cross-cutting themes, ESSP topics, and other important research areas: Land-use/land-cover change; Industrial transformation; Global environmental change and human security; Institutional dimensions of global environmental change; Urbanization; Coastal zones, human use of oceans; Regional approaches to human-environment studies; Adaptive management and resilience; Methods in human-environment studies; Sustainable development; Environmental history; Globalization and global environmental change; Science - policy interface in global environmental change; and Human dimensions of carbon and water management, food and health.

Thus although the Open Meeting most clearly corresponds to the last objects, in fact it related to all 5 of the objectives in the APN Research Framework:

- (1) Climate Change & Variability;
- (2) Changes in Coastal Zones & Inland Waters;
- (3) Changes in Atmospheric Composition;
- (4) Changes in Terrestrial Ecosystems & Biodiversity; and
- (5) Human Dimensions of Global Change

Furthermore, regional collaboration and capacity building were top priorities for the 6th Open Meeting. The participants supported to attend from APN member countries had the chance to meet colleagues from the region and to exchange experiences, data and techniques. Numerous regional level side meetings were organized, taking advantage of the presence of a high number of participants from various regions. The previous Open Meetings were thus successful in establishing these regional networks, but the 6th Open Meeting particularly aimed to go farther and strengthen these networks.

Finally, the 2005 Open Meeting offered a strong platform for National Committees and National Contact Points to meet and compare experiences as well as discuss challenges and progress in the human dimension community. This half-day meeting occurred on the last day of the conference, with another half-day preparation embedded in the Open Meeting itself in order to ensure collaboration with the rest of the community. Furthermore, NC members were particularly encouraged to submit proposals for sessions in the call for sessions / panels. The Asia-Pacific region was well represented here, as IHDP National Committees and National Contact Points are active in Bangladesh, China, Fiji, India, Indonesia, Japan, Laos, Malaysia, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Taiwan, Thailand, and Vietnam.

Self-evaluation

On many levels, the 6th Open Meeting exceeded the expectations of even the planning committee- with over 1,000 participants, it was almost 3 times as large as the last Open Meeting in Montreal. Furthermore, high level policy makers from UNFCCC, German and Chinese federal ministries, as well as UN bodies were courted and successfully integrated into the meeting, raising the profile of this event in Bonn and the wider region. Fundraising efforts were successful, with financial or in-kind contributions from nearly 20 sources. Finally, on a logistical level there were nearly no technical glitches despite the challenging technical needs of the conference- a self-run internet café for participants (password protected WiFi and OM badges required for entry), and at times up to 17 sessions happening simultaneously, each with microphones, laptops, LCD projectors or slides. This success was thanks in large part to our competent IT team as well as the successful recruitment, training and retaining of student volunteers to oversee sessions.

On a more critical note, at its final meeting on the last day of the Open Meeting, the planning committee noted that many of the researchers and sessions were similar in format and content to what has been seen in past years. It was noted that a greater effort should be made in the future to diversify the session formats (perhaps with more round-table or open types of discussions, or hands-on tools demonstrations), as well as encourage collaboration between and across disciplines and projects, and finally also include more up-and-coming researchers to get involved as organizers of sessions and not just presenters.

Potential for further work

Many participants from the 6th Open Meeting are on our mailing list to receive information about continuing IHDP events. Thus they are being encouraged to stay in touch with the human dimensions community in one of the numerous other events coming up in the near future, many of which are in Asia, such as the biennial International Human Dimensions Workshop (IHDW) in October 2006 in Chiang Mai, Thailand; the Earth-System Science Partnership (ESSP) Open Science Conference taking place November 2006 in Beijing; or the IDGEC Synthesis Conference in December in Bali. Many of the same participants have already applied for these events, and quite a few have had abstracts of sessions accepted – often from participants that had gotten involved with the HD community for the first time in October 2005 in Bonn.

A further reflection of the importance of the Asian-Pacific region is the venue of the next (7th) Open Meeting, to be held in 2008 in New Delhi, India, with TERI (The Energies Research Institute) taking the lead in organizing. Exact date TBA.

Publications

Currently material is being gathered for two books of an Open Meeting publication, with NOMOS as the publisher. Regional comparisons and case studies have been pinpointed from each of the main themes at the 6th Open Meeting, and editors will be from well-established researchers in the human dimensions (most have already confirmed). The idea of this publication is not an exact recreation of session abstracts, but instead a collection with significant added value, showcasing the best successes and exciting current and future trends of human dimensions research.

Acknowledgments

Acknowledgment to START for managing the APN funds, the University of Bonn for a generous in-kind contribution, as well as the 50 student volunteers who patiently and earnestly dedicated numerous hours to help in the day-to-day running of this conference.

1.0 Introduction

The 2005 Open Meeting of the Human Dimensions of Global Environmental Change Research Community will be the sixth to be held. These Open Meetings have consistently served as important vehicles to stimulate networks in the regions where the meetings have been held. The first Open Meeting was held at Duke University, USA, June 1 - 3, 1995. The objective of this meeting was to bring together the growing human dimensions research community for exchanges of information on current research, teaching and outreach, to encourage networking and to attract other natural and social scientists not previously involved in human dimensions research.

Since then, Open Meetings have been held every other year (1997 in Vienna, Austria; 1999 in Shonan Village, Japan; 2001 in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; and 2003 in Montreal, Canada). The next Open Meeting is scheduled for 9-13 October 2005 at the University of Bonn in Bonn, Germany. Due to strategic importance of this next Open Meeting for the mid-term review process of the International Human Dimensions Program (IHDP)'s science and several of its core projects, it was decided that Bonn, Germany would be the ideal setting for this meeting.

For this reason, IHDP is taking the lead in organizing the 2005 Open Meeting. Other co-organizers are the Center for International Earth Science Information Network (CIESIN) at Columbia University, USA; the Institute for Global Environmental Strategies (IGES) in Kanagawa, Japan; the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA) in Laxenburg, Austria; the International Human Dimensions Programme of Global Environmental Change (IHDP) in Bonn, Germany; the United Nations University (UNU), and the University of Bonn, Germany.

Support within Germany for hosting the 2005 Open Meeting is strong. The University of Bonn is serving as local host and a co-organizer of the event, which helps to receive special University prices in regards to room rental and catering. The co-chair of the German National Committee on Global Change Research is a member of the International Scientific Planning Committee. IHDP has good relations with the German Federal Ministry for Education and Research (BMBF), the Research Ministry of North-Rhine Westphalia (MWF) and the German Research Foundation (DFG).

We believe that the human dimensions networks in the Asia-Pacific have been essential components, catalysts and beneficiaries of these Open Meetings. In particular, the Third Open Meeting, held in Shonan Village, Japan, was very successful at attracting (with APN support) scholars from the Asia-Pacific region and was, therefore, a major driver in building up and strengthening the networks in this region. As a result, since then it has been felt to be particularly important to ensure participation of Asia-Pacific scholars, both to ensure continuity, and because a major function of the Open Meetings is to bring together researchers and younger scholars from developing countries (and those from the USA and Europe) who otherwise would not be able to participate in a major international conference along with senior scientists. As a result, the 2003 Open Meeting organizers raised close to two hundred thousand dollars (US$ 200,000) in travel fellowships for such scholars. We would like to be able to raise a similar amount next year in order to continue to ensure the participation of young scholars.

Particularly by bringing together international scholars from different disciplines, the Open Meetings help create significant opportunities for tangible cross-fertilization. There are extremely few venues in which scholars from disciplines as diverse as sociology, physics, geography, ecology and urban planning can interact with each other on areas of common substantive interest. The Open Meetings have a proven track record at creating a unique venue for precisely such interaction. The most recent Open Meeting in Montreal provided such an opportunity for over 500 researchers from 50 countries, bringing with them a rich diversity in global change research, to collect, exchange and analyze a wide body of scientific information and data.

An International Scientific Planning Committee (ISPC) has been set up to organize the meeting (see nr. 10, appendix 1, list of major collaborators). Its first Planning Meeting took place from March 27-28, 2004 in the Center for Development Studies (ZEF) in Bonn, where IHDP is also located.

The primary organizational outputs of the meeting were as follows:

- The IHDP core projects should have a key role in defining the themes and sub-themes of the Open Meeting, around which the call for panels and papers should be organized (See below).
- The core projects' IPO's should coordinate the selection of panels and papers for the themes and sub-themes that pertain to them.
- Although the core projects should have a leading role, the sessions should be open to researchers not yet involved in the networks.
- The core projects should take over the organization of the session that pertains to them. This would also give them an opportunity to present the outcomes and results of their work.
- Each member of the ISPC will have specific tasks
- Co-chairs of the ISPC are Barbara Göbel and Eduardo Viola

The basic structure of the meeting itself was set to include

- YHDR (Young Human Dimensions Researchers) Network meeting together with 60 participants from developing countries (1/2 day)
- Open Meeting (3 days)
- National Committee Meeting (1/2 day)
- SSC Meetings of IHDP core projects immediately preceding or following the OM (IT, LUCC, IDGEC etc. dates TBA)

The Open Meeting will be structured to include poster presentations, parallel poster sessions, and early-morning plenaries. High level top choices for speakers for these plenaries were identified by the ISPC and preliminary contact has already been made. The breakdown of the planned plenaries is as follows:

- Sunday, October 9th
Opening speech (evening)
- Monday, October 10th
Wake-up call (morning plenary)
- Tuesday, October 11th
IHDP Science (morning plenary)
- Wednesday, October 12th
Disciplinary / multidisciplinary perspective (morning plenary)
- Thursday, October 13th
Addressing burning / key questions by top scientists; review of week (morning plenary)

A list of themes for the poster and paper sessions was also created at this meeting:

1. IHDP core projects (mostly Tuesday):

Land-use/land-cover change
Industrial transformation
Global environmental change and human security
Institutional dimensions of global environmental change
Urbanization
Coastal zones, human use of oceans

2. Themes common to several IHDP core projects (Wednesday):

Regional approaches to human-environment studies
Adaptive management and resilience
Methods in human-environment studies
Sustainable development

3. Other research areas (Monday):

Environmental history
Globalization and global environmental change
Science - policy interface in global environmental change

4. ESSP cross-cutting projects (Wednesday):

Human dimensions of carbon and water management, food and health

A fundraising strategy to maximize potential for participation by developing country and young scholars was also created. The ISPC will meet a second time after the IHDP SC Meeting, March 24-25 2005 in order to review the remaining abstracts and to decide on the composition of the parallel sessions not completed in the open call.

The Open Meetings bring significant tangible benefits to the broad research community concerned with the human dimensions of global change:

- By promoting greater interaction among researchers from developed and developing countries, they foster the kinds of scientific exchange (sharing data and techniques, collaborating on joint research) that enhance understanding of global processes.
- By engaging additional researchers from developing countries in this vibrant research community, they strengthen the basis for continued human dimensions research within developing countries. Often participants in the Open Meetings organize national-level organizing committees to help secure funding and coordinate research on human dimensions of global change, for example.
- Finally, because the Open Meetings bring together so many scholars from so many countries, they provide a considerable logistic aid to teams of scholars seeking cost-effective means to bring research teams together. The Open Meetings typically engender a large number of "side events" that take place before or after the Meeting to continue discussion of ongoing projects or to build plans for new ones.

Concrete examples of the strengthening of the APN relationship have come out of the most recent Open Meeting in Montreal:

- A strengthening of the research community with active participation of many Asian researchers, including several young researchers who participated in the one-day Young Human Dimensions of Global Environmental Change (HDGEC) Researchers meeting prior to the conference; and

- At least one APN-funded researcher has, on the basis of her participation, been asked to submit an article for the International Human Dimensions Programme (IHDP) Update newsletter.
- 128 of the participants of the 2003 Open Meeting were from 11 different Asian APN member countries. This strong showing from Asian participants helped to initiate dialogue and an exchange of experiences on global change research specific to the region.

These Open Meetings are, for many participants, their first chance to meet and network with other like-minded researchers in their region and even in their own country. It is also an important opportunity for the exchange of ideas and methodologies between different regions' approaches to global change issues

Thus we believe the biennial Open Meetings are invaluable events for meeting, consolidating and exchanging ideas and research, as well as planning future actions for the widely dispersed and international human dimensions community. We believe they are essential for the global environmental change community and we will continue to strive for a balanced regional representation. For this, APN has played and we hope will continue to play a very important role in supporting Asian participants to the Open Meetings. We look forward to continued close cooperation with APN in the future.

2.0 Conference Outputs

1. The Open Meeting website, <http://openmeeting.homelinux.org>, is still active and includes all paper/ poster/ session abstracts, information about the programme and schedule of the conference, and numerous power point presentations from session organizers and keynote/ plenary speakers.
2. In addition to making numerous materials, abstracts and presentations available online, discussions are currently underway with NOMOS publisher in order to put out two volumes on excellent papers from the 6th Open Meeting.
3. The extensive Open Meeting database (connected to the website), with contact information for over 2,000 interested participants (half of whom actually were accepted and attended the event), is still active and is being used not just to publicize continued updates and presentations from the 6th Open Meeting, but also to disseminate and compare information on participation and future events.
4. The Young Human Dimensions Researchers Network (YHDR) was strengthened and will continue to collaborate and disseminate information through a listserv and future events.
5. Institutional links were strengthened and the funding base for HD research broadened, which will be followed up on in preparation for the next 7th Open Meeting in India in 2008.

3.0 APN-Funded Participants

APN funds were instrumental in enabling numerous active participants (through travel grants, accommodation coverage and waiving of registration fees) to attend, interact with colleagues, and contribute to the 6th Open Meeting. The direct goal of the use of APN funds was the assistance of networking and capacity building for this region.

For a list of participants supported with APN funds, as well as their name, institution, address, abstract/ role at OM, please see Appendix 1.1.

For feedback and abstracts outlining their fields of interest and how the conference was valuable for their career agendas, specifically for networking and capacity building, please see Appendix 1.2.

4.0 Conclusions

Considering the high level speakers from the policy and scientific arena, as well as the incredible show of interest as well as attendance from all over the world, the Open Meeting really drew together a higher profile and larger crowd than ever before. This was no doubt due in large part to the topicality of many of its research areas, and the increasing awareness in all communities of the necessity of looking at global environmental change issues with a human perspective in mind.

All in all, the 6th Open Meeting in Bonn was a successful event for the Human Dimensions of Global Environmental Change Research Community, marking the end of “Phase I” of the IHDP in which its scientific results over the past 10 years were consolidated and presented. It also provided the perfect transition to the beginning of “Phase II” of the IHDP, in which these results will be increasingly communicated to the outside world, specifically the policy community.

To this end, several specific follow-up measures are planned:

- A European Science-Policy workshop, to take place in Berne, Switzerland from 21-22 September 2006;
- A series of German Science-Policy workshops, “The Bonn Dialogues,” to take place in Bonn starting in January 2007;
- A policy brief series
- A publication series, coming not just out of the Open Meeting but of IHDP work in general
- Our 5th International Human Dimensions Workshop (IHDW) and embedded science-policy workshop, to take place in Chiang Mai, Thailand in October 2006;
- The Earth System Science Partnership (ESSP) Open Science Conference, to take place in Beijing in November 2005.

All of these events are intended to feed off of the energy created around the 6th Open Meeting, as well as feed into the 7th Open Meeting in India in 2008.
